

Half a century is a long time: Polytechnic University Trade Union celebrates its anniversary!

The Trade Union of Peter the Great St. Petersburg Polytechnic University celebrates its 50th anniversary today.

On November 16, 1965 Kalinin Polytechnic Institute held the Trade Union Conference that saw the Institute's Trade Union split up in two separate organizations: Trade Union Committee for students and Local Committee for professors. This day marks the beginning of a long and exciting history of our Trade Union that has now become the only representative body of SPbPU students.

In the course of preparations for the anniversary celebration, we reconstructed the history of our organization, laying the foundation for the book called "Union card". Half a century is a long time: the organization has been through breakups and reunions, switched names, new young students became chairman. Today we are one of the major student organization in St. Petersburg and the city's largest student union.

We are proud of our history! We love our university!
