Conditions of participation in the conference

International Scientific and Technical Conference "Nanotechnologies and Functional Materials" (NFM'16) is traditionally held on a comfortable ship within 4 days (21-25 June 2016). In addition to participating in the plenary and section sessions, the conference participants will visit the unique recreational (reserved) areas of the North-West region of Russia: Sortavala (Ruskeala village) with excursion to the marble canyon natural Park of Ruskeala, Mandrogi village with excursion to an ensemble of wooden architecture, trade and crafts village where a picnic lunch of Russian cuisine will be organized, Valaam island with the tour of the monasteries of Valaam (Rocky shore, Northern Athos), Pellotsaari island and Kizhi island.

Park of Ruskeala

Ruskeala is a rural locality (a settlement) under the administrative jurisdiction of the town of republic significance of Sortavala in the Republic of Karelia, Russia. Within the framework of municipal divisions, Ruskeala is a part of Kaalamskoye Rural Settlement in Sortavalsky Municipal District.

An international tourist route, Blue Highway (Norway-Sweden-Finland-Russia) goes through Ruskeala.

History

Before the Winter War and Continuation War, it was the seat of Ruskeala Municipality of the Viipuri Province in Finland. Ruskeala became the main village of its own parish, independent of Kitee, in 1721.

Nature

The quarry site has been designed to become Ruskeala Park, a regional park. A series of small cascade waterfalls on the Tokhmayoki River is another popular tourist attraction situated near the settlement.

Mandrogi village

Thirty kilometres from the town of Lodeynoye Polye, between the Ladoga and Onega lakes, on the left bank of the Svir river, in the place of the village Verkhnie Mandrogi, which was razed to the ground during the Second World War, stands a reproduction of a traditional Russian settlement. The village is a unique centre for recreation and tourism. Mandrogi was designed to accommodate corporate guests and visiting families; here, every effort is made to create a warm, homely atmosphere and welcome each guest with personal attention.

The reconstruction of the village began in 1996, on the initiative of the businessman S. E. Gutzeit, who also sponsored the effort. Back then, the area was no more than an overgrown willow meadow on the banks of the river. In 1999, the Russian Federation government passed a decree to place the village of Verkhnie Mandrogi on the official Map of Russia.

At Mandrogi (which means 'thresholds' in the local language, Vepsian) a number of buildings have been constructed, including a series of traditional mansions decorated with intricate carving, two hotels, a post-office and artisans workshop imitating palatial Boyar terems, the homestead of a landowner and a large restaurant, called the 'Gostiny Dvor'.

Adult visitors are sure to be interested by the Vodka Museum. The museum's collection includes more than two and a half thousand different labels of vodka: this is the number produced in the homeland of this infamous drink. However, the museum staff do not encourage drunkenness—quite the opposite: they explain the benefits of consumption in moderation, and promote a sophisticated drinking culture.

Valaam island

Valaam, also known historically by the Finnish name Valamo, is an archipelago in the northern portion of Lake Ladoga, lying within the Republic of Karelia, Russian Federation. The total area of its more than 50 islands is 36 km<sup>2</sup>. The largest island is also called Valaam. It is best known as the site of the 14th century Valaam Monastery on Valaam Island and for its natural beauty. In the 12th century, the islands were a part of the Novgorod Republic. In the 17th century, they were captured by Sweden during the Time of Troubles, but Russia reconquered them less than a century later. When the Grand Duchy of Finland was set up in the early 19th century as an autonomous part of the Russian Empire, Alexander I of Russia made Valaam a part of Finland. In 1917, Valaam became a part of newly independent Finland, but it was acquired by the USSR after the Winter War and Continuation War. The name of the island is from the Finno-Ugric word valamo, which means the high, mountain, ground.

The island was visited repeatedly by emperors Alexander I, Alexander II, and other members of the imperial family. Other famous visitors include Tchaikovsky and Mendeleyev.

During the summer, the main island can be reached by tour boats which leave St. Petersburg at night and arrive at the island the following morning.

The president of the Russian Federation has a dacha on one of the islands of Valaam, but its precise location is not publicly known.
