We have common publications in SCOPUS, a joint grant was submitted to conduct 10 seminars on thermal power engineering, said the Vice-Rector about the fruitful interaction of both universities.

In the future, the universities intend to expand cooperation in high-tech areas such as new materials, industrial management and computer science. This creates prospects for close contacts, given China's advanced achievements in artificial intelligence.

We are focusing on the development of engineering and technology areas. Through our cooperation with SPbPU, we will be able to increase the number of students studying at our universities and create opportunities to attract Russian students to our programs. Our common goal is to provide students of both countries with quality education that meets modern requirements and labor market trends, emphasized Yang Jingbo.

In addition, the parties discussed the creation of new joint educational programs of bachelor's and master's degrees, as well as the development of scientific projects. Chinese colleagues considered the possibility of creating short-term courses for students from SPbPU who want to get acquainted with educational programs in the PRC.
